

Megan Wagner is a wife, mom, dance educator and dreamer. Her lifelong dream of becoming a dancer started during her very first class at the age of six. That "Free Trial" class changed her life for the better. She was hooked. Since then she has spent countless hours absorbing everything she can in the genres of ballet, pointe, tap, jazz, lyrical, contemporary, and hip hop.

During high school Megan had the honor of participating on the Varsity Dance team all four years and being a part of the student staff her junior and senior year which gave her the ability to lead her fellow dancers in typical class exercises and choreograph for their bi-annual showcases. Between leading and choreographing at school and assisting and subbing at the studio Megan really developed her passion for teaching. Seeing that lightbulb go on and the excitement that comes from accomplishing a skill is the absolute best. Although Megan loves teaching all ages and styles she really has a heart for beginning teens who maybe didn't have an opportunity to dance at younger ages.

With now 20 years working as a dance educator Megan feels so fortunate to be working under Cassi and Pablo Infante's direction and is ecstatic to be a part of the NCAD staff.

In her spare time Megan loves to spend time with her husband and four children hiking and enjoying the great outdoors. She also is heavily involved with her church's 3 yearly musical theater productions where she still gets to choreograph, dance and also perform alongside her children. Another dream come true.
